Loch Garten and Loch Mallachie

Start	Loch Mallachie car park	GPS waypoints   NH 971 185  NH 969 182  NH 965 174
Distance	1¾ miles (2.75km)
Height gain	Negligible
Approximate time	1 hour
Parking	Loch Mallachie car park, first on right before Loch Garten; RSPB reserve signed from B970 1½ miles (2.4km) east of Boat of Garten
Ordnance Survey maps	Landranger 36 (Grantown & Aviemore), Explorer OL57 (Cairn Gorm & Aviemore)

This is a very short walk into the RSPB’s reserve at Loch Garten famous for its nesting ospreys (though the hide for observing the nest site is about ½ mile (800m) to the east and is reached from the next car park). There is always the possibility of seeing one of the ospreys flying to or from the nest while on this walk which takes you to the shores of a pair of beautiful lochs, with views of the long ridge of the Kincardine Hills beyond.

 From the RSPB car park take the woodland trail southwards through the forest. This is part of Abernethy Forest, the largest area of native pinewoods in Scotland. The RSPB reserve now covers over 31,000 acres (12,545 ha) and is renowned for its ospreys – birds of prey living primarily from fishing – which have bred here since 1959.

Many of the other species of birds to be seen in the reserve may lack the glamour and publicity value of the ospreys but are still of great interest to ornithologists.

Soon come to a fork where an arrow points right, but first go left for a view from the loch shore. The loch is fringed by pine trees and heather, and the western summit of the Kincardine Hills, Craiggowrie, draws the eye to the south. In the autumn views northwards. On a good day you will be able to see the Sutherland mountains clearly and some have claimed to see the Cuillins of Skye from the Cairngorm summits. There is a cairn at the top of the buttress which is probably the best viewpoint on this route. Look to the left beyond the lochans on the floor of Coire an Lochain to see the homeward path.

A series of small cairns leads you around the rim of the corrie and up to the summit of Cairn Lochan D where the cairn itself (at 3,986 feet/1,215m) is built very close to the edge of a sheer drop of 1,000 feet (300m) – a fact made all the more dramatic by the rock towers which overlook it. It is also worth looking southwards for a view of Ben Macdui, whose cairn should be quite clearly visible.

Leave the cairn and follow the rim of Coire an Lochain gradually turning towards the north-west. Then cross a wet flush by stepping stones to gain the well-maintained path running north down the Miaden Creagan Leth-choin ridge. Lower down this well-defined path angles down the right side of the ridge to cross a stream by stepping stones E. It continues on a bee-line back to the ski car park, crossing another stream on the way.

Dinnet the way passes through the heart of the Muir of Dinnet, a wide glacial basin overlooked by fine hills where the birch scrub and heather are particularly attractive in late summer and autumn. Dinnet itself was a village which sprang from the coming of the railway. Its only other claim to fame was that, at the age of eight, Lord Byron spent time at a nearby farm recovering from scarlet fever. The former railway brings you back to the centre of the village opposite the starting point.

park and in a few paces turn right towards the river. Bear left down to the riverside path. A folly with seats and a balcony lies just to the right, but the route goes left and crosses the the Lairig an Laoigh, a route right through the Cairngorm mountains to rival the better known Lairig Ghru.

Bynack More

The path levels out and divides. Both become vague. The Lairig an Laoigh path swings away to the east and starts to descend. Our path (on the map) crosses spot height 818m

D from which the main ridge of Bynack More rises dead ahead. The first few feet of the ridge is up steep grass after which the gradient eases. The ridge is boulder strewn on the right and rocky on the left. The crest is not sharp and provides an interesting and relatively safe route to the top. At last the summit

Carrbridge and General Wade's Road

Start	Carrbridge	GPS waypoints  NH 907 227  NH 896 224  NH 895 212  NH 887 199  NH 883 199  NH 869 220  NH 891 226  NH 898 230
Distance	8 miles (12.8km)
Height gain	720 feet (220m)
Approximate time	4 hours
Parking	Carrbridge car park
Ordnance Survey maps	Landranger 36 (Grantown & Aviemore), Explorer OL57 (Cairn Gorm & Aviemore)

This is an enjoyable low level ramble through forest and moor and on paths along meadows and riverbanks. The highlight of the walk is General Wade's Road which is followed as far as Sluggan Bridge, a memorable beauty spot. From here a path leads back to Carrbridge, never far from the River Dulnain. Note that after heavy rain there may be difficulty in fording Allt Lorgy near .

 From the car park on the Aviemore road (B9153) turn right and walk as far as the post office. Turn left here, just before the bridge, into Station Road. The remains of the famous packhorse bridge, built in 1717, can be seen on the right. It was badly damaged in the disastrous flood of August 1829.

Outstanding Circular Walks in the CAIRNGORMS

200 miles of amazing walking amid the imperious splendour of the Cairngorms, Britain's most extensive mountainous area. Low level and hill walks are ranged across the National Park, from Newtonmore to Ballater and Grantown to Blair Atholl. See ospreys at Loch Garten, pass through ancient Rothiemurchus pine forest to the Lairig Ghru and tackle the demanding mountain walks of Braeriach and Lochnagar.
