Goring

Based in the south-western fringe of the Chilterns this walk follows an undulating route in an arc to the north, east and south of Goring, passing through a succession of attractive wooded areas. Near the end there are superb views looking across the Thames Valley to the Berkshire Downs.

Goring

Goring stands on the eastern bank of the Thames where the river cuts through the Goring Gap between the Chilterns and Berkshire Downs. The bridge linking Goring and Streatley on the western bank dates only from the 19th century; before that it was necessary to cross the river by ferry.

Retrace your steps back through the village turning left out of High Street at the top of the climb and almost immediately turn right down a driveway, signposted Cleeve A. Where the drive bends slightly right turn left along a fenced tarmac path to a road. Keep ahead through a modern housing area and where the road ends, continue along a tarmac path for a few paces, then turn right through a fence gap and cross a track.

Widbrook Common and Cliveden Reach

The walk to Cookham is mostly across flat, open meadow and marshland, with fine views across the surrounding countryside. After Cookham the route heads for the Thames and continues along Cliveden Reach, a beautiful stretch of the river below the glorious hanging woods of Cliveden, to return to Boulter's Lock.

Cuckhamsley Hill and the Ridgeway

Crossed by the Ridgeway, Cuckhamsley Hill rises to a height of 666 feet (203m) above the downs near the border between Oxfordshire and Berkshire. This short walk explores an area of remote, virtually uninhabited countryside characterised by wide and sweeping vistas; the openness of the downs here to the west of the Thames Valley is in striking contrast to the more wooded Chilterns to the east.

 At the car park entrance turn right along a track, in the 'Public Right Of Way' direction shown on a footpath sign, across the downs. Immediately there are striking and expansive views, with the Thames Valley away in the distance on the left. The track gently descends and bears gradually right to reach a road A.

Turn right along the road for  $\frac{1}{4}$  mile (400m), and just in front of a solitary house turn right B on to a track – there is a public back to 1889, on the right and then an historic 500-year-old pub, the Fox and Hounds, on the left. Continue through Christmas Common, pass a turning to North End on the right and take the next left turn (Watlington). Pass the speed de-restriction sign and follow the road back to the car park at Watlington Hill. ●

Christmas Common

Christmas Common

apparently takes its name from an extraordinary incident here during the Civil War. In the Christmas of 1643 the Parliamentarians held nearby Watlington while the Royalists defended the ridge on which this hamlet is situated. Because it was Christmas a temporary truce was called and both armies met on this spot during the festivities.

In Egypt Woods, Burnham Beeches

Beeches and walk along a concrete drive. Pass in front of houses and continue along the path ahead through Egypt Woods, the northern part of Burnham Beeches and named after a former gypsy encampment. The path heads downhill to a fork at the bottom. Here take the left-hand path – the waymarked post is almost obscured by bracken – to continue gently uphill to a T-junction of paths on the edge of woodland E. At this point follow the Circular Walk sign sharply to the right along a path that keeps along the left-hand edge of woodland, by a wire fence on the left, then continues once more through the trees.

Follow this well-waymarked path for  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile (800m), eventually climbing a stile and keeping ahead to go over another one on to the lane at the starting point.

houses of Kingston Lisle looming into view. At the road turn right.

Walk through the village, passing the Blowing Stone pub. The church, visible on the left near the junction, includes many Norman and 13th century features and its thick chalk walls are adorned with paintings of the life of St John the Baptist. Keep right at the junction, following the road towards Fawler, Uffington and Faringdon. Pass Kingston Lisle Farm on the left, follow the road as it descends quite steeply and when it curves right, turn left at a footpath sign and stile D.

Follow the path ahead across the field towards trees and distant hills. Continue via a stile into the next field, then the next across a stile by a galvanised gate. Go across to a low ladder stile, then keep ahead in the next pasture with hedgerow on your left. Head up the slope to the field corner, go through a gate and out to the road. Cross over to a footpath sign and gate and go straight ahead along a cinder track.
